Ellen Harrison 1889

da: Needle WorkPress

Everything about Ellen Harrison's 1889 sampler is charming—well, perhaps except the yellow background she started to stitch under the deer's chin. (Although we charted it, we elected to omit it when stitching.) Other than that, the sampler is a stitch-by-stitch copy of Ellen's nineteenth-century woodwork. To make its size more manageable, we opted for 36ct linen instead of the 10ct canvas she used for her 23" w x 17" h sampler. Her naive chair, umbrella, ship and cane join more common motifs including birds, flowers, trees, a large stag and a blue-roofed house. When she ran out of space stitching the verse, Ellen merely added the final word on the top line. The use of subtly-overdyed silk threads creates a mottled effect, much the same as Ellen's original sampler. Truly a fun and cheerful stitch!

To Dearest Momma

da: Needle WorkPress

Sometimes memories cross generations and make and cultures to create a timeless emotion that they will share. This little cross-stitch was actually written in such that are hand hammered into the frame of a felt art mirror hanging in Vicki's family room. She started stitching it several times, but didn't go through with it until encouraged by a fellow stitcher. Signed and numbered #10889 by LD Barke III (2014-2014), a note on back of the mirror reads, "This is an original by LD Barke. The keys are antique gold keys found in Northern Texas at an old antique store. Enjoy it and I know how you feel about your momma. I lost mine years ago but our souls, 'cause she's still locked in my heart. All the best, LD Barke III, P.S. You be a good momma to someone, too. —LD" enthusiasm and share they love to enjoy. The very tags at a mother's heart—helping our children, she risk the treatment memories of our love. (We certainly aren't perfect, but we try our best.) On the other hand, as the child of a mother suffering from Alzheimer's, the words have special meaning for Vickie.

With the permission of LD's wife Joanne, we shared the same for cross-stitch.

Ann Gott 1848

da: Needle WorkPress

NN GOTT 1848 SAMPLER

I was 16 years old when she stitched this sampler featuring vibrant motifs with a seasonal dedication. Ann Gott was born in 1852 in Kent, Westmoreland, England. Her christening took place there. Ann's father was Thomas Addison Gott and her mother was Ann Hay. Her paternal grandparents were Elizabeth Addison. She had two brothers and two sisters, named William, Thomas, Catherine and Elizabeth. Perhaps she is our sampler maker. Although the antique is stitched mostly in a covered color on silk, overdyed cotton and DMC options. We've also charted the dedication so make your sampler for a friend, mother, father, child or sibling.

Elsie Curtice

da: Needle WorkPress

We wish we knew more about Elsie and her cheerful schoolgirl sampler! Alas, all we know is that the sampler hails from England, and that Elsie loved color, cats and dogs. Its style and materials date it to the mid- to late-1800's. We've adapted this Victorian woolwork sampler from its coarse canvas with wool threads to linen with overdyed cotton floss. The phrase "Home Sweet Home" goes back to 1823 and the opera "Clari," or "The Maid of Milan," which was first performed in London. The lyrics were written by American actor and playwright John Howard Payne (1791-1842). The music was composed by Sir Henry Bishop of England. The song starts out, "Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam, be it ever so humble, there's no place like home." The song became quite popular throughout the United States, and was a favorite of both Union and Confederate soldiers during the Civil War.

Fanny Johnson

da: Needle WorkPress

With a stitch count of 92 x 85 high, Fanny's sampler measures a mere 2.21" square. Select your favorite red fabric, a scrap of blue and recreate this tiny treasure adored by a child for her teacher. Approximate measurements are listed below.

While you sew this from a student that a precious sentiment. Measuring 2.21" square, the design was stitched over one thread on slightly stretched fabric with about 41 threads to the inch with and 38 threads high. Over one thread, your sampler would measure about 1.718 x 1.574 on 28d linen, 2.016 x 2.774 on 32d linen, 2.876 x 2.471 on 35d linen, 2.274 x 2.274 on 40d linen and 2.714 x 1.374 on 60d linen. Be sure to add 2" to each side when cutting your linen. Thread count will determine type of fabric used. Created for your stitching pleasure in Chandler, AZ 1988 special thanks to Nancy Husted and Sandy Fisher. Enjoy every stitch! --Vicki & George
